Contracts for the International Sale of Goods (CISG) Workshop

Introduction:

As of 18 December 2015, the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) reports that 84 States have adopted the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods (CISG).

The CISG is the uniform international sales law of countries that account for two-thirds of all world trade. Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, South Korea, Japan, Mongolia and China are all contracting states of the CISG. The applicability of the CISG in the Hong Kong SAR, however, remains unclear and is subject to debates.

In Hong Kong, lawyers and traders are increasingly involved in cases to which the CISG applies. Arbitrators have also been called upon to decide the applicability of the CISG to Hong Kong parties. What then do Hong Kong traders, lawyers and arbitrators need to know about the CISG?

Highlights:

The workshop focuses on what common law lawyers, arbitrators and cross-border trading companies and merchants in Hong Kong need to know about the CISG. It will develop participants' understanding of the applicability of the CISG in Hong Kong and further substantiate their understanding of the principles and crucial differences between the CISG and English and Hong Kong law.

Target audience:

Lawyers, arbitrators and merchants involved in international and cross-border sale of goods transactions and related disputes.
